

I have been on the no-call list for two years now and think it's great. If anything I'd like to see it tougher; to prevent automated surveys and solicitations. I feel these are invasive and annoying when they persist in calling at meal times or late at night. Appeals for donations should be excluded as well. I already support the agencies I believe in. This year my brother asked me to submit their name to the list too as they have seen such an increase in unnecessary calls. Some telemarketers just don't take no as your answer either and that's way too offensive.
